Biochar master thesis.

The character co-products of these processes have a lot of potential as BioChars: produced the μ of biomass in a sustainable way used to alter soils and carbon sequestration. ONE Slow pir³lisis, rapid pir³lise and gasification are thermal processes to produce fuel and biomass chemicals. the properties of BiChar vary significantly with the conditions of the raw and reactionary μ , the characterization of biochar is fundamental to understand these variations, to obtain significant data from the agronomic studies of biochar, and to determine the most beneficial and economical application of a given co-product of characters (fuel, sorbent or soil seam). These parameters all include proximal analysis, CHNS elemental analysis, superfield gION sensor analysis, hF pycnometry, scanning electron microscopy (SEM), X-ray fluorescent spectroscopy (XRF), FT infrared spectroscopy with photodetector (FTIR-PA), State 13C Restroscopy nuclear magnetic ³ (NMR), Catijs exchange capacity (CEC), pH, conductivity, and incubation of short-term soil with soil breath and water retention μ . One result of this research has been the incorporation of biochars derived from corn stover and switchgrass and derivatives by ³ and fast gasification in the discussions μ the wider biocharin community. BiChar, Feature, Corn Stover, Gasification, Pir³lise, Switchgrass Show statistical μ NonDiscrimination Policy Privacy Policy Digital access and accessibility This dissertation describes the characteristics of the biochar used mthth μ
